Task 2

These days more and more computers are used in the schools for teaching students.

Discuss the advantages and disadvantages of using computers at school for learning.

At present, the usage of computers has become prominent in all the educational institutions for teaching their students.

There are some people who believe that this trend has more negatives than the positives. There are various pros and cons behind using computers at school.

To begin with, the prime merit of using computers for teaching is, that learning experience becomes much more better. As they can see the visuals in bright and colourful way which gives a more realistic touch and feel to them. Not only this, tools such as projectors which can operated with the help of computers make teaching and learning both easy as well as interesting. This means, pupils learn live and latest content which evokes their imagination quickly. Moreover, usage of computers prepare children for the future. As in their adult life computers are used in every domain from colleges to jobs.

which makes it very crucial for them to learn from their childhood.

However, using computers at school may hold certain drawbacks. First of all, all such devices have artificial intelligence which means they can not interact one to one with the students according to their learning ability. Unlike teachers who can teach the learners by observing their individual level. Along with it, using computers also hampers children's writing skills. For an instance, currently all the software such as Microsoft word have auto correction tool which automatically eliminates grammatical errors and even spellings . which does not even allow children to practice hand writing skills. Ultimately, this affects the students hand writing as well as language proficiency .

To wrap up, the usage of computer related devices at school has both benefits as well as drawbacks. But it is up to the school how it can take maximum benefits from the technology and overcome its negatives.
